“Orlandina, choreographed by Risima Risimkin and performed with her dance poetry by Rosana Hribar, is a dramatically coherent dance novel of a new time about physical desire in a given space and time of individual personal realization, when it is not about incarnation, but rather about the breath, the sigh of a life, of a person.

New movement pulses, her sophisticated minimalism in the poetics of gestures and gesticulations coincides with the metal beats of rhythm; they are their intimate, intense outbursts of movement.”
